How can we create a better world for LGBTQ+ people? 35 extraordinary voices share their stories and visions for the future

We talk about achieving 'LGBTQ+ equality', but around the world, LGBTQ+ people are still suffering discrimination and extreme violence. How do we solve this urgent problem, allowing queer people everywhere the opportunity to thrive?

In We Can Do Better Than This, 35 voices explore this question. Through deeply moving stories and provocative new arguments on safety and visibility, dating and gender, care and community, they map new global frontiers in the fight for LGBTQ+ rights. Featuring Peppermint, Olly Alexander, Wolfgang Tillmans, Naoise Dolan, Owen Jones, Beth Ditto and more.

Escape to the ocean this summer with the Costa Book of the Year 2020

By the island of Black Conch, a fisherman in a small boat waits for a catch, singing to himself. But he attracts a sea-dweller that he never expected. Aycayia, a beautiful young woman cursed by jealous wives to live as a mermaid, has been swimming the Caribbean Sea for centuries. She is entranced by David and his song.

When Aycayia is captured by American tourists, David rescues her and vows to win her trust. Slowly, painfully, she transforms into a woman again. Yet as their love grows, the two begin to discover that they cannot escape the jealousy and violence of their world for ever.

Author Location: London

An exhilarating, subversive and mind-bendingly original meta-medical-memoir from the author of Let Me Not Be Mad

A woman with locked-in syndrome, a naked man discovered on a plane at Heathrow, a taxi driver with memory loss: through three case studies of traumatic brain injury, clinical neuropsychologist A K Benjamin examines the uniquely intimate and deceptive nature of the clinical relationship. Ingenious, daring and perfectly formed, The Case for Love is a dazzlingly original drama about how doctors, like writers, inhabit their patients' minds, how every work of fiction is, beneath the surface, a form of memoir, and how every act of imagination is, in essence, an act of love.

THE WHOLE STORY

Patrick Tidmarsh

29 July 2021

A leading criminologist draws on over 30 years' experience working with sex offenders to propose a new way of understanding sexual crimes

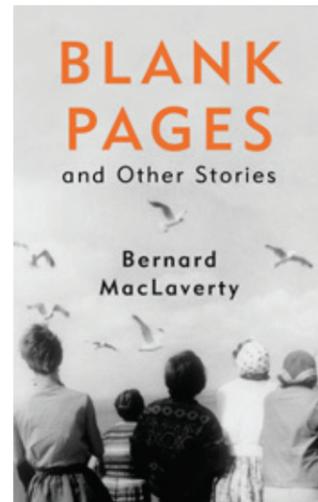

The prevalence of sex crimes has become one of the most urgent, and most widely misunderstood, subjects of our times. We are living through a sea change in our attitudes to sex crimes, yet we continue to get things badly wrong in the way we respond to them. Drawing on over 30 years' experience, Patrick Tidmarsh argues that we need to find a new way to understand, investigate and talk about these crimes. He forces us all to question our own prejudices and assumptions – about both victims and perpetrators – and to question the social, criminal and judicial systems that mean that so few of these crimes ever end in convictions.

With calm authority and sensitivity, he sets out what has gone wrong, and proposes a ground-breaking new solution.

Author Location: Glasgow

Twelve new stories from the bestselling, Booker-shortlisted author of Grace Notes and Midwinter Break

Bernard MacLaverty is a consummately gifted short-story writer and novelist whose work - like that of John McGahern, William Trevor, Edna O'Brien or Colm Tóibín - is deceptively simple on the surface, but carries a turbulent undertow. Everywhere, the dark currents of violence, persecution and regret pull at his subject matter: family love, the making of art, Catholicism, the Troubles and, latterly, ageing.

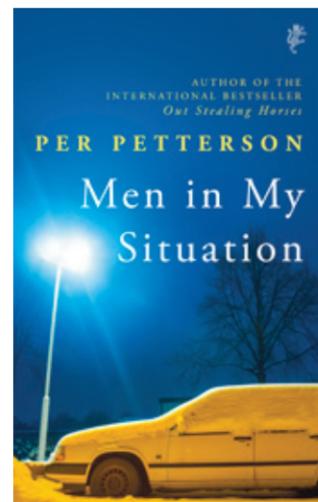

Blank Pages is a collection of twelve extraordinary new stories that show the emotional range of a master. Each story he writes creates a universe.

From the author of A Separation, a taut and electrifying story about a woman caught between many truths

An interpreter has come to The Hague to escape New York and work at the International Court. A woman of many languages and identities, she is looking for a place to finally call home.

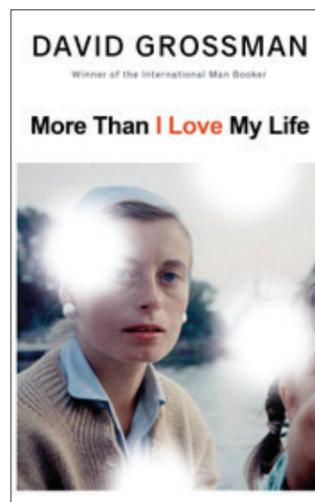

This woman is the voice in the ear of many, but what command does that give her, and how vulnerable does that leave her? Her coolly impassioned views on power, love, and violence, are tested, both in her personal intimacies and in her role at the Court. She is soon pushed to the precipice, where betrayal and heartbreak threaten to overwhelm her; it is her drive towards truth, and love, that throws into stark relief what she wants from her life.

Author Location: Fife, Scotland

Lucid, lyrical and intellectually profound: this collection of poems resonates with real life and death, but mostly what falls in between: the charmed darkness

Several ghosts haunt Learning to Sleep, John Burnside's first collection of poetry in four years. Throughout the book, the powers and dominions of a lost pagan ancestry emerge unexpectedly through the gaps in contemporary life: half-seen and fleeting, but profoundly present. Behind it all, the figure of Hypnos, the Greek god of sleep, marks Burnside's own attempts to come to terms with the severe sleep disorder from which he has suffered for years, a condition that culminated in the recent near-death experience that informs the latter part of the book. Learning to Sleep reveals Burnside at his most elegiac, while still retaining a radical pagan's sense of celebration and cultural independence.

Author Location: London

Tim Moore completes his epic (and ill-advised) trilogy of cycling's Grand Tours

Julian Berrendero's victory in the 1941 Vuelta a Espana was an extraordinary exercise in sporting redemption: the Spanish cyclist had just spent 18 months in Franco's concentration camps, punishment for expressing Republican sympathies during the civil war. Seventy nine years later, perennially over-ambitious cyclo-adventurer Tim Moore developed a fascination with Berrendero's story, and having borrowed an old road bike with the great man's name plastered all over it, set off to retrace the 4,409km route of his 1941 triumph - In the midst of a global pandemic.

What follows is a tale of brutal heat and lonely roads, of glory, humiliation, and then a bit more humiliation. Along the way Tim recounts the civil war's still-vivid tragedies, and finds the gregarious but impressively responsible locals torn between welcoming their nation's only foreign visitor, and bundling him and his filthy bike into a vat of antiviral gel.

How violence has found its way into the bedroom and what we can do about it

Every woman has a 'rough sex' story. A story where a sexual experience turned nasty, where something happened that felt degrading, where their sexual partner did something they didn't want. Maybe they told a friend about it, maybe they kept it to themselves. The normalisation of these prevalent violent sexual experiences is causing long-lasting and life-threatening harm to women, and our silence on the matter is perpetuating the problem.

In this crucial and groundbreaking read, Mashable journalist Rachel Thompson brings together the latest scientific research, commentary from leading experts on the topic and interviews with over 50 women about their experiences, to explore what rough sex looks and feels like, the long-lasting damage it causes, and how we go about changing it, for good.

Jonathan Cape

Author Location: Los Angeles

An expansive, exhilarating work of nonfiction on freedom - perhaps our most timeless, yet forever urgent, human need - by one of the most significant writers of our day

So often deployed as a jingoistic, even menacing rallying cry, or limited by a focus on passing moments of liberation, the rhetoric of freedom both rouses and repels. Does it remain key to our autonomy, justice, and well-being, or is freedom's long star turn coming to a close? Does a continued obsession with the term enliven and emancipate, or reflect a deepening nihilism (or both)?

Author Location: Manchester

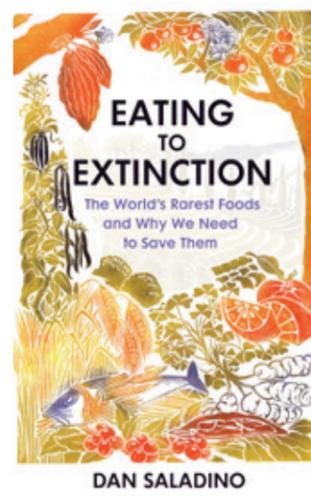

A visceral, complicated and beautifully written account of a young woman's experience of abortion

Larger than an Orange is a deeply personal retelling of the days preceding and weeks and months following the author's experience of an abortion. Part diary, part prose poem, part collage, this memoir is intensely moving, strikingly written and politically important. The stakes of the debate around abortion have not left much space for ambivalence, pain and confusion. The politics are black and white but the experience can be shades of grey and the silence around the issue leaves many women feeling alone. We need to have more nuanced conversations about abortion that reflects the complex reality of the experience.

As she explores what happened to her, Lucy Burns faces questions of sex, trauma and reproduction. In her lyrical and distinctive style, she creates a new space for young women and their bodies.

The follow-up to Adrian Tinniswood's bestselling The Long Weekend: a rollicking tour of the English country house after the Second World War, when Swinging London collided with aristocratic values

As the sun set slowly on the British Empire in the years after the Second World War, the nation's stately homes were in crisis. Tottering under the weight of rising taxes and a growing sense that they had no place in twentieth-century Britain, hundreds of ancestral piles were dismantled and demolished. But, surprisingly, many more survived, as duke and duchesses desperately clung to their ancestral seats and a new class of homeowners bought their way into country life.

From the Rolling Stones rocking Longleat to Christine Keeler rocking Cliveden, Noble Ambitions takes us on a rollicking tour of these crumbling halls of power, as a rakish, raffish, aristocratic Swinging London collided with traditional rural values.

Bodley Head

A corrective to the prevailing view which regards the 1960s as a period of liberation, joyful experimentation and celebration of youth, Growing Up takes an unflinching look at the dark underbelly of the sexual revolution

No era in recent history has been both more celebrated and vilified than the 1960s. For some it was a decade of liberation from stifling conformity, deference and a morality still grounded in Victorian values. For others, the decade marked the advent of the permissive society, with its undermining of authority, family values and common decency. At the heart of this continuing controversy is sex.

Growing Up provides an honest, often disturbing portrait of a constant battle between two forces: the urge to free the body from guilt and restraint; and the desire to control, cannibalise and exploit that liberation for financial gain or selfish pleasure.

Charlotte Raven was in her mid-thirties when she discovered that she carried the faulty gene for Huntington's Disease, an inherited neurodegenerative illness for which there is - currently - no cure. The discovery had implications not only for her, but also for her young daughter and her unborn son.

Patient 1 is her brutally honest account of the bewildering experience of coming to terms with this illness. It is also a kind of reckoning: with the illness, with the person she once was, with the person she is now. Charlotte is frank, fearless, and sometimes very funny, about her behaviour and the self-understanding that came with her illness.

Woven through this memoir is a deeply hopeful story of medical breakthrough and a possible cure. Charlotte's doctor, Edward Wild, one of the country's leading experts in Huntington's, explains how a crucial medical trial could one day help to eliminate this disease altogether. Patient 1 provides a rare and fascinating exploration the doctor-patient relationship from both points of view.

Murder stalks a touring stage production of A Christmas Carol in this 1930s-set festive mystery

December 1935. Director Monty Harrison's production of A Christmas Carol has had a troubled run on its tour of regional theatres. With tensions amongst the cast running high, the company reach their final stop - London's Theatre Royale.

Catastrophe, however, strikes on opening night: Scrooge dies on stage, the result (it is presumed) of a heart attack. But the show must go on. Until, that is, a leading theatre critic - and old rival of Monty's - is killed backstage. Are those associated with the production being picked off one by one? Budding journalist Daphne King takes up the case...

Vintage Classics

The first openly trans author on a Classics list, this is a unique first-hand account of a historical trans person's life, which read like a euphoric coming-of-age novel

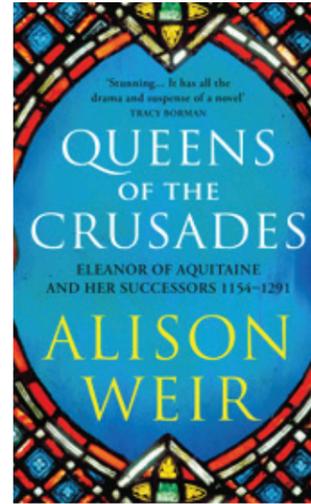

Lou kept intimate diaries from the age of 10 until his tragic death at 39. Through these candid extracts, we hear Lou's life in his own words: from tween crushes on the Beatles, to first trips to San Francisco's gay bars cruising for 'youngmen' (handsome gays); from first hearing about gender non-conforming communities, to becoming a beloved trans-rights activist. This selection foregrounds Lou's exuberant love of life, men, and sex.

The winner of the 2020 Lambda Literary Award and a finalist for the Publishing Triangle Award when first published in the USA, Lou Sullivan's diary will join the ranks of the most significant LGBTQ chroniclers, such as Anne Lister, Oscar Wilde, and Derek Jarman.

Author Location: Surrey

The next volume in Alison Weir's magisterial history of the queens of Medieval England - including the life of Eleanor of Aquitaine, the subject of Alison's most successful book

The Plantagenet queens of England played a role in some of the most dramatic events in our history. Crusading queens, queens in rebellion against their king, queen seductresses, learned queens, queens in battle, queens who enlivened England with the romantic culture of southern Europe - these determined women often broke through medieval constraints to exercise power and influence, for good and sometimes for ill.

Alison Weir provides an enthralling new perspective on a dramatic period of high romance and sometimes low politics, with determined women at its heart.
